PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

Peace in South Africa is much to be desired; but peace that will only mean the opportunity to prepare once more for war against the empire is not to be desired, whether the price to be paid is great or small. The price already paid to secure the safety of the empire in that quarter of the world is too high to make profitable any settlement that shall be other than final, no matter what the terms of the settlement may be. Considering the temper of the enemies of the empire in South Africa, and elsewhere, and the construction which they have always placed upon Britain's always admitted desire for peace, it is more than questionable whether it is well even to enter into negotiations looking to that most desirable end. The danger is that negotiations may be interpreted as surrender of Britain's absolute authority and unquestioned supremacy, nothing short of which will ever insure peace in South Africa. To make terms with a foe who has shown himself to be so implacable is to admit the strength of that foe, and to correspondingly show weakness on the part of the empire. This would not be the case under ordinary circumstances; but the circumstances are not ordinary. Dealings with a people as determined as the Boers have shown themselves to be, must show still greater determination if the settlement is to be conclusive. It is true that the late South African Republic and Orange Free State, and the rebel districts of Cape Colony and Natal, have suffered terribly from the ravages of war, but the people of those regions and not the empire are responsible for these conditions. They deliberately chose war; they have already refused terms of peace which were ridiculously favorable to them all things considered; and the logical conclusion is that they do not want peace except at the price of the humiliation of their loyal neighbors in Cape Colony and Natal, and in every colony and dependency of Britain throughout the world. After the expenditure of blood and treasure that has been made by the empire, the only terms of peace with the Boers that can comport with the dignity of the empire and the honor of its loyal citizens is unconditional surrender. Whether that result is near or far it is the only result upon which lasting peace can be concluded. The question there was not the franchise, or the control of the gold or diamonds mines. It was whether Britain or Boer should be supreme. To stop short of a settlement of that question after such stupendous losses have been incurred would be nothing short of madness.

It may be admitted freely that the military prowess of Britain has not so far been demonstrated in this war as its friends would wish. But the conditions being as they were it was well that they were unmistakably proven by the eastern logic of facts. Britain has had a rude but much needed awakening on military matters. To that extent the Boers have been friends rather than enemies in that they have shown the need of change and improvement. So long as the Boers have officers and men who are able to outgeneral the officers and men of Britain, so long it is better that the war should continue so that sometime after such loss of life and treasure may be—the empire shall have secured an army, and adopted a system, by which the army will be as superior to the Boers as it has hitherto been shown to be inferior in what makes for success in modern warfare.

Canada's War Contribution.

Ottawa, April 30.—Since the commencement of the South African war Canada has sent to the front 7,358 men, including the 2,000 now under way. On these there were expended $2,000,000. There have been in all eight different corps sent out as follows:

First Contingent, Infantry, 1,150 officers and men.
Royal Canadian Dragoons, 379.
First Canadian Mounted Rifles, 388.
Royal Canadian Artillery, 539.
Strathcona Horse, 579.
South African Constabulary, 1,208.
Second Canadian Mounted Rifles, 935.

Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth C. M. R., or fourth contingent, now under way, 2,000.
Besides these Canada has furnished a field hospital of 62 men and 16 nurses; and 1,004 men in the third provisional R. C. M. R. at Halifax. Including 62 of the hospital corps and 1,004 stationed at Halifax, Canada has furnished a grand total of 8,424 men for British service since the war broke out. Canada has also sent 40 ladies to teach in the public schools in Africa.

In all about 2050 horses will be sent from Canada with the fourth contingent, namely, 1000 from Ontario, 400 from Quebec, 250 from the Maritime Provinces, and 400 from the Northwest Territories.

PARLIAMENT.

Ottawa, April 25.

Bulletin Correspondence.

On Thursday Honorable Mr. Blair presented his estimates for the Intercolonial railway making a very full statement of his general policy in its management. There has been a general feeling of disappointment at the last year's showing of the Intercolonial expenses having been about half a million dollars over receipts. The minister's presentation of his case was full and vigorous. The deficit was accounted for by an increase of a dollar per ton in the cost of coal owing to strike amounting to $280,000, and in increase in rate of wages and of staff amounting to $120,000. The unusual outlay of last year amounted to $700,000 yet the deficit was only $480,000. He looked for a small surplus at the end of the current fiscal year and in support of that view showed that for eight months of 1901 the deficit had been $657,000, while for the corresponding eight months now ending, the deficit was only $136,000. This he hoped to wipe out before the end of June. He admitted having spent large sums in permanent improvements on the Intercolonial but claimed in justification that when he took hold of the road it had run down in rolling stock and road bed so that it was in poor second class condition. He had put on new and up-to-date rolling stock and this had rendered necessary improvements of the rails and roadbed. He had extended the line to Montreal and had put it in business as a first class railway competing for the traffic of the continent and carrying trade to Canada's ocean ports. This had cost money but he felt that it was the only course to pursue. He had no apology to offer for having taken that course and intimated a possible extension of the railroad to the Georgian Bay so that it might compete directly for the grain trade of both the Canadian and United States West. Haggart, ex-Minister of Railways, followed and criticized the vast expenditures, methods of bookkeeping, and general policy. He made a careful and effective criticism. He placed himself directly in opposition to the minister's policy of making the road a competing through line. He did not consider that the heaping up of expenditures upon a road which could never compete on advantageous terms was sound policy. The estimates for the Intercolonial occupied the whole of Thursday and Friday's sessions.

Arming Canadians.

Ottawa, April 30.—The contract between the government and the Ross Rifle company was signed to-day. In the terms the government adopted the Ross rifle as the arm for the Canadian army, stipulating that it shall be manufactured in Canada. The factory is to be in Quebec and will commence with some 200 or 300 hands, though it is calculated that in a very short time the number employed will average 1000.

There is also a contract between the government and Sir Charles Ross, in which the government bind themselves to purchase all their rifles from him. Personally giving him a preliminary contract for 1200 rifles.

line which they placed upon this land grant. They have a grant of 358,000 acres, which they themselves value at a price varying from $2.50 to $3 per acre, amounting to a total value of from $750,000 to over $1,000,000, and they are not able to build 55 miles of railway on that land grant, but want a further extension of time. They came again in 1898, and again in 1900. Their land grant was renewed by order in council dated 1900, and expires on the 1st July, 1903. Now, Mr. Speaker, for the information of the House, I beg to say that I suggested to the railway committee that the extension of time to be given the company should coincide with the date limiting their land subsidy. But they said: "No, we cannot build in that time; it will not be on the 1st July, 1903. They said: "If you cannot build within the time that enables you to earn your subsidy, you cannot build at all, and you do not want to build at all. It is simply a case of trying to hold up a land grant and of holding up the public until something turns up that will enable you to sell the charter to better advantage." These were the reasons, as I understood which caused the railway committee to reject the application of the company; and I submit that if this House has any reason to be in favour and right to the country at large, or to the people who are developing the country, they will support the action of the railway committee, and refuse to refer the bill back.

PARLIAMENT.

Ottawa, April 24, '02.
Bulletin Correspondence.

It is a peculiar characteristic of the House of Commons—that it is not the ordinary business of parliament which excites the greatest interest of its members. During the past few days some very important legislation has been introduced, passed through its various stages, and finally enacted into law. But on Wednesday a motion by Charlton to advise the Imperial government as to the proper basis of its peace negotiations with the Boers brought on a warm discussion in a full House with crowded galleries. The point of Mr. Charlton's motion was that the interests of peace in South Africa required a policy of the broadest magnanimity of the British towards the Boers. Standing by itself the terms of the motion scarcely expressed its full meaning. That was conveyed much more fully in his first notice which was reproduced in the morning paper. This called for an answer to the House of Commons and Natal as well as of the Free State and Transvaal. Apparently Mr. Charlton had reconsidered the terms of his motion and retracted it accordingly, but his speech made it clear that his purpose was the same. Mr. Charlton followed the course of the United States government towards the defeated confederacy in the civil war in that country as a basis of his argument for magnanimity towards the Boers. He said that it would have been more in order if he had taken up a modern instance and based his comparison on the attitude of the United States military authorities towards the Filipinos in the war now in progress, which however justifiable cannot be considered as a shining example of either magnanimity or mercy. That did not trouble Mr. Charlton, however, who worked off a fairly long speech that could only be construed as an insinuation against the right feeling of Britain and a desire that those who had attempted to break down the prestige of the empire should be saved from the proper consequence of their course, the result to be that neither would they nor others be deterred from like efforts in the future. The resolution was seconded by Mr. Bourassa in his usual style and on his usual lines of argument. The premier agreed to the terms of the resolution so far as it advised the settlement of the war in South Africa on the basis of British supremacy and generous treatment to the vanquished, but he did not think any resolution necessary. He did not dispute the right of parliament to discuss the question but he considered the time was neither opportune nor judicious. The effect of the resolution would be rather to encourage a prolongation of the war than to make for peace, and he suggested that the motion should be withdrawn. The mover was willing to withdraw but the seconder was not. The discussion was taken part in by Messrs. Monk, Spence, Monet, Hughes, Oliver, Kemp and Demers, the latter speaking in French. At the conclusion of his address the motion was rejected without a vote.

The estimates of the Minister of Agriculture were up for consideration and the census accounts were the subject of discussion during the whole of Wednesday evening. The opposition made a strong point of the fact that although the population of the country had not increased greatly since the previous census the cost of taking the present census was much larger. This was explained by the minister on the ground that the cost of labor had increased and that the number of questions to be asked by the census enumerators had also been largely increased. This added to the work both of taking and compiling hence the increased expense. While the minister was being badgered because of his heavy census expenditures by eastern conservatives, western liberals were just as ready to find fault with the evident desire on the part of the department to unduly save expense. Although the work had been done nearly a year ago many of the accounts remained only partly paid, awaiting the decision of disputes between the enumerators and the department. This condition of affairs was brought to the minister's attention. He said that the department was demanding vouchers for all expenditures and were unable to get the accountant to pass the accounts until the vouchers were procured. Oliver pointed out that the first instructions sent out did not require vouchers and that the subsequent instructions requiring vouchers reached the enumerators too late in many instances to admit of vouchers being procured, that is, after the work had been done. In other cases the local circumstances were such that it was an absolute impossibility to procure vouchers. He urged that some means be taken to close up these accounts at the earliest possible date. The minister said that while the department insisted on vouchers wherever possible, in cases where it was impossible to procure them they were arranging to accept a detailed statement verified by affidavit. By this means he hoped to be able to close out the accounts satisfactorily and at an early date. Bills were introduced on Wednesday to give the Yukon district a representative in the House of Commons; to increase the area of the Banff Park from two hundred and sixty to four thousand nine hundred square miles. A resolution was also adopted to provide salaries for two police magistrates in the Yukon at four thousand dollars a year each, and eighteen hundred dollars each, living expenses; also to provide for an additional high court judge of the Yukon at a salary of five thousand dollars.

To the Electors of the District of Victoria.

Gentlemen.—Having received a petition largely signed by the independent electors of the district asking me to be a candidate at the approaching general elections for the Legislative Assembly of the Northwest Territories, I take this opportunity of thanking the electors for their confidence in me during the past and have much pleasure in announcing that I accept same, hoping to be favored with that same confidence in the future.

Announcement will appear in the local papers of a series of meetings called throughout the district when opposing candidates will be invited to attend and will have an opportunity of being heard.

Thanking you one and all, and hoping to be favored with your vote and influence, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

FROM THE MOUNTAINS.

N. H. Jock came in last week from his trading post on Prairie Creek, east of the Yellow Head Pass. When he started on his journey on April 12th, there had been no snow for a month, and his partner had burned off the meadows and the young grass was already showing up. They had done some successful angling for trout during the first week in April.

Mr. Jock having determined to look for a better trail than the old one which has been in general use and which is so bad in places; the services of an Indian, accustomed to hunt in the neighborhood were secured. The result has proved very satisfactory for a country, almost free from muskegs has been found. The "bad muskeg" is avoided as well as the crossing of about twelve streams. The only muskeg which would be troublesome in the summer time will be corduroyed by Mr. Jock and his men on the return journey. By the new route the bad trail over the Athabasca "divide" is also missed. Another advantage secured is that there is good feed for the horses all the way through.

Mr. Jock has sown some wheat and will also put in a small crop of barley and oats besides general garden stuff. The winter was most pleasant. The warm chinook winds being frequent, the horses were able to feed without pawing.

A collection of fur was brought in and disposed of to McDougall & Secord for $1,600.
